I want to

in a diverse community of scholars.

A vibrant underwater scene showing a person in a blue and red swimsuit snorkeling over a healthy coral reef. Sunlight filters down from the surface, creating a dappled light effect on the reef and the swimmer. The swimmer is looking towards the camera, and their arms are extended forward. The background is a deep blue ocean.

I want to make every

Oh, the places you'll go. Choose the learning experience that's right for you. Your classroom might be at the foot of a volcano or at the top of Mount Kilimanjaro, in the ABC newsroom or at the Museum of Modern Art, in a wildlife preserve or in the nation's capital. Or work with the world's top scientists at nearby Brookhaven National Laboratory, co-managed by Stony Brook.

She is leaning against the teal-colored side of a white ambulance. The scene is outdoors during the day.

Giving back is a big deal at Stony Brook. Students work with local fire departments as EMTs, mentor incoming students, work in soup kitchens and shave their heads to fund cancer research.

Every spring dozens of students help rebuild faraway communities through our dynamic Alternative Spring Break Outreach (ASBO) program.

Stony Brook made the 2014 Presidential Honor Roll for Community Service in Higher Education.
